Ghost photos from the Internet

If it's on the Internet it must be true, right? NOT! But it's fun to see what some people are putting out there in the way of paranormal photographs.

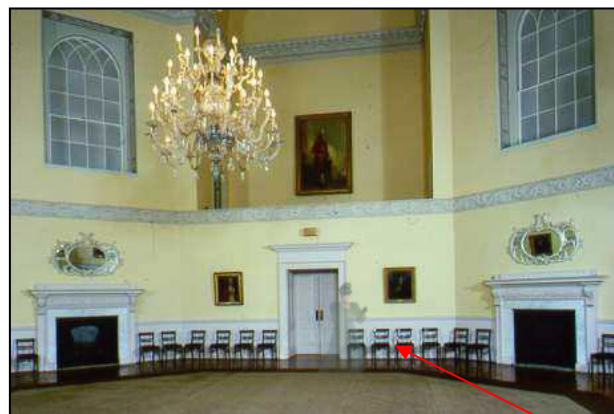

If this isn't real, how'd they do that? Could be a new-age foam mattress, but it is unlikely anyone would put one of those on an antique bed—and if so, would the impression in the mattress stay long enough to take a photograph of it? Doubtful.

This photograph is one of several that were taken by a professional police photographer. After developing the pictures of this accident scene, the officer found what looked to be some type of a "figure" in one particular picture. Thinking it was a problem with his camera or its film, he performed tests on both. They checked out PERFECTLY!. The people in this car survived this accident. Perhaps the photographer captures a Guardian Angel—on of the occupant's relatives looking out for their safety.

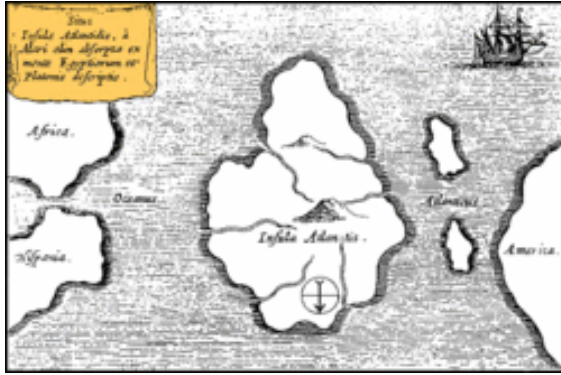

This one was obviously taken a long time ago—before the age of Photoshop. Again, the ghostly image is transparent.

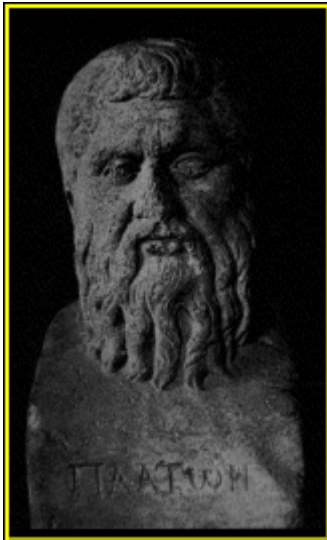

Could be a double exposure—could be real.

Atlantis~Real or Fable?

Athanasius Kircher's map of Atlantis, in the middle of the Atlantic Ocean. From Mundus Subterraneus 1669, published in Amsterdam. The map is oriented with south at the top.

The possible existence of a genuine Atlantis has been actively discussed throughout history. The story of Atlantis was discovered by Humanists in modern times. Plato's description inspired the utopian works of several Renaissance writers, like Francis Bacon's "New Atlantis." Atlantis inspires literature even today-- its name having become a byword for any and all supposed prehistoric but advanced (and lost) civilizations.

Plato - Greek philosopher - 427-347 B.C.

Note: Dates are approximate, there is some uncertainty as to his birth and death

Plato was a student of Socrates until the latter's death in 399 BC at the hands of the Athenian authorities. After his teacher's death, Plato traveled extensively, including journeys in Egypt.

In 387 BC he returned to Athens and founded The Academy, a school of science and philosophy, that became the model for the modern university. Perhaps the most famous student of The Academy was Aristotle whose teachings have had tremendous impact on philosophy through today.

Due to The Academy's safekeeping, many of Plato's works have survived. His extant writings are in the form of letters and dialogues, the most famous of which is probably The Republic. His writings cover subjects ranging from knowledge to happiness to politics to nature.

Two of his dialogues, Timeaus and Critias, hold the only known original references to the island of Atlantis.

From Plato's Timeaus: "Many great and wonderful deeds are recorded of your state in our histories. But one of them exceeds all the rest in greatness and valor. For these histories tell of a mighty power which unprovoked made an expedition against the whole of Europe and Asia, and to which your city put an end. This power came forth out of the Atlantic Ocean, for in those days the Atlantic was navigable; and there was an island situated in front of the straits which are by you called the Pillars of Heracles; the island was larger than Libya and Asia put together, and was the way to other islands, and from these you might pass to the whole of the opposite continent which surrounded the true ocean; for this sea which is within the Straits of Heracles is only a harbor, having a narrow entrance, but that other is a real sea, and the surrounding land may be most truly called a boundless continent.

Now in this island of Atlantis there was a great and wonderful empire which had rule over the whole island and several others, and over parts of the continent, and, furthermore, the men of Atlantis had subjected the parts of Libya within the columns of Heracles as far as Egypt, and of Europe as far as Tyrrhenia. This vast power, gathered into one, endeavored to subdue at a blow our country and yours and the whole of the region within the straits; and then, Solon, your country shone forth, in the excellence of her virtue and strength, among all mankind. She was pre-eminent in courage and military skill, and was the leader of the Hellenes. And when the rest fell off from her, being compelled to stand alone, after having undergone the very extremity of danger, she defeated and triumphed over the invaders, and preserved from slavery those who were not yet subjugated, and generously liberated all the rest of us who dwell within the pillars.

But afterwards there occurred violent earthquakes and floods; and in a single day and night of misfortune all your warlike men in a body sank into the earth, and the island of Atlantis in like manner disappeared in the depths of the sea. For which reason the sea in those parts is impassable and impenetrable, because there is a shoal of mud in the way; and this was caused by the subsidence of the island.”

The exact location of the lost city of Atlantis has been questioned by many people, like British Royal Air Force photo interpreter J.M. Allen. He is convinced Atlantis is in Altiplano, near the Andes Mountains, in Bolivia. The famous psychic channeler Edgar Cayce believed the remains would be found off the coast of Florida near Bimini Island. Other people think it's lost somewhere in Central America, the China Sea or Africa. Others believe that Atlantis is nothing more than a myth.

Hundreds of books have been written on the subject of this mystical island. Everyone seems to have a theory on where it might have been, and if it might have been. The most noted of these are hundreds of readings by Edgar Cayce on the subject. According to the readings, records of this society exist to this day in Egypt, the Yucatan, and near Bimini. In fact, the Cayce readings considered the Bimini Islands the remnant of a mountain range from this once-massive continent.

From Cayce’s perspective, much of modern-day technology is simply the rediscovering of knowledge and information possessed by the Atlantean culture. Yet, although the Atlanteans were advanced technologically, many of the people lost their sense of purpose by becoming too attached to power and the material world. In time, this once spiritual populace became fractured into two distinct groups: the Children of the Law of One and the Sons of Belial. Those of the Law of One carried on the spiritual tradition of their ancestors, while the Sons of Belial became engrossed with satisfying their physical appetites and desires. This split would eventually lead to the continent’s downfall and eventual destruction.

PHYSICAL EVIDENCE: RUINS

Atlantic: Scott Stones

(http://members.tripod.com/~k_two/mysteries/atlant6.htm)

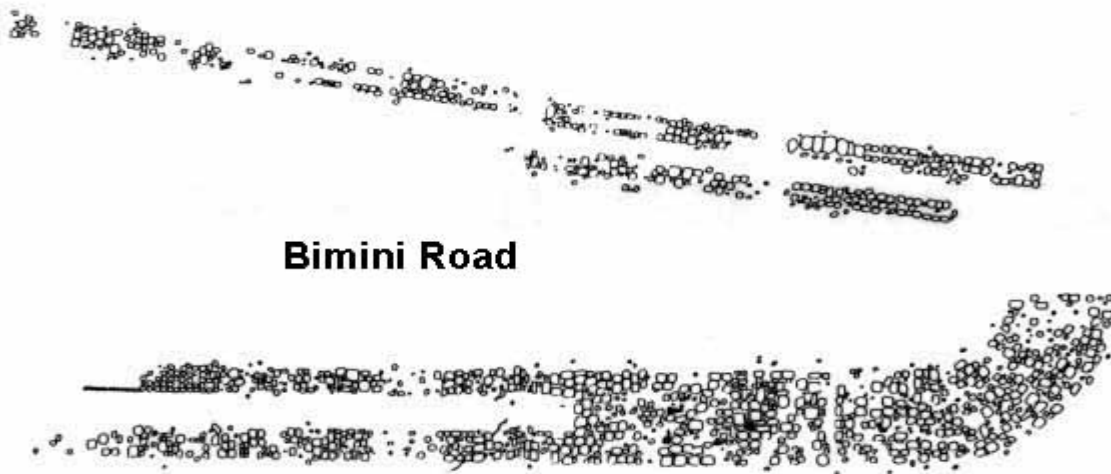

The ruins of temples dated at 12,000 years old have been found near Bimini, Bahamas. Megalithic structures are not supposed to be in the Bahamas. Preliminary analysis has revealed that the original structures, although smaller in size than the Great Pyramid of Giza, appear to have been more advanced. Casing stones have been measured which are of the same unique angle as those at the Great Pyramid.

The ruins are megalithic and bear a remarkable resemblance to ancient sites in Egypt. So called "quarry marks" found in the Aswan quarries and also on the Great Pyramid, itself, appear to be identical matches with those found on the Bimini temple stones. One major difference, however, between the Egyptian sites and these stones is that on The Bimini stones you find a great number of sky maps which have recorded the paths of various heavenly bodies.

The major concern of the mysterious ancient civilization that produced these heavenly maps seems to have been Saturn and Jupiter -- with the oldest records reflecting an emphasis in Saturn. Some of the stones are under water and some of them are under the sand under water. They are not in their original formation. It appears that the most important or revered numbers associated with these ruins were the numbers five and nine.

These numbers were also of great significance to the ancients of Egypt and Meso-America. Evidence indicates that a "checkerboard" calculator system was being used. Examples of this system were found on top of the Great Pyramid and were long used for numerical calculations in Meso-America. This same checkerboard pattern shows up on the lintel stones of temples built by Celts of Iberian origin. Also, according to some astronomers, this pattern served as a calendar regulator to measure the sunrise and sunset directions on solstices and equinoxes.

Other characteristics closely match features at megalithic sites in Peru, the Yucatan, Ireland and Scandinavia. Analysis of these enigmatic ancient temples built near Bimini over 12,000 years ago has only just begun. Although many maps of the heavenly realm adorn various walls of these mysterious Bimini temples, there is an almost complete lack of other markings.

Of the limited glyphs that do exist, however, several match those found in the famous Altamira Cave in Spain (known as the Sistine Chapel of pre-history) which contains the well-known bison painting. In addition, there are exact orbital plots of the planets and what seem to have been intricate star shafts, metal-coated walls, and intermingled stones of various colors.

One of the unique features of the ancient temple ruins, built near Bimini by an unknown advanced civilization which apparently was thriving while most of the rest of the world was plodding through the Stone Ages, is that these stones may be far more likely to yield an accurate account of their true age than most of the famous megalithic sites around the world. There are also instances in which lava has flowed in between some of the temple stones which may give scientists an approximate date when submitted to testing.

The antiquity of the stones almost leaps out at you upon first glance. There are hollows which have been left in certain broken stones which have undergone such an extensive amount of crystal growth upon their inner surfaces that they now look like the inside of a geode! In many cases, the cement that once held the huge stones together is now completely crystallized. Some of the massive granite blocks now exhibit significant portions, which have metamorphosed over the ages to the point where they are no longer even granite.

But perhaps, most significant of all is the fact that organic matter has been found within a hermetic seal; along with unruined, worked iron. The iron began to rust soon after the seal was opened, however, which would indicate that the seal had prevented the entry of oxygen for thousands of years. The organic matter was in pristine condition and should prove to be an interesting target for dating procedures. Other hermetic seals, which have yet to be opened, are known to exist as well.

Edgar Cayce predicted that just this sort of thing would be discovered. These findings not only match Cayce's predictions but Plato's writings. There are exact orbital plots of the planets and what seem to have been intricate star shafts, metal-coated walls, and intermingled stones of various colors (including red, white and black).

So, who were the Atlanteans? Why were they so much further advanced than their contemporaries from most other areas around the world? Some people believe that the inhabitants of Atlantis were not human, but were actually alien beings conducting experiments on earth. I was personally present at a Past Live Seminar where one of the attendees was regressed and related a story of experiments between humans and animals that he had lived through during a past life he experienced in Atlantis. Why would anyone make something like that up? Maybe his favorite movie was The Island of Dr. Moreau, and his subconscious mind went back to that screenplay instead of a real memory. Or, perhaps the author of the book was also reliving a past life experience! It would be difficult to prove one way or another.

This painting, "The White Lady" (Bradberg - South Africa) is 3-5,000 years old. It depicts a red-haired white woman and a man wearing Cretan clothes (boots, pants, sword). They are surrounded by black people and animals. Edward Herbert Norton, the discoverer of Mayan centers in Yucatan and of the "Fountain of the Death" from Chichen Itza, advanced a new theory: a powerful civilization lived in Atlantis till 10,000 BC when the water sank the island. It is being said that the Atlanteans colonized the shores of Africa, Mediterranean Sea, and America, so if the Atlanteans perished, their heritage lived on through the people of their colonies.

Do You Think Your House Is Haunted?

Here are some indications of a haunting:

Missing objects, or objects that have been moved without explanation

Unexplained sounds: knocking, footsteps, voices

If a person or a pet has ever died in your home, there is a possibility that they are still in the home.

Your pets react as though they are frightened of something you cannot see.

You, or someone else who comes to visit you, sees movement or figures out of the corner of their eye.

You feel atmospheric changes: cold spots, hot spots, or “denseness” of the air.

You, or someone else who visits, feels something unseen touch them.

Has your home been built over a cemetery, battlefield or a sacred site?

You, or someone else who visits, has an overwhelming feeling of being watched.

A paranormal event can be an intensely personal experience. Whether other people believe you or not, do not be afraid to acknowledge what you have encountered. If any or numerous of the above experiences have happened to you, I recommend that you keep a record of the events in some sort of a journal. This might be a clue as to who is behind the activity and what they are trying to communicate to you.

If you would like your home investigated free of charge, please contact me at edparanormal@comcast.net.
